7. CONCLUSIONS:

Since the discharge of the effluents containing othililnone is regulated under NPDES, according to the current EFGWB policy, the registrant only needs to support the Hydrolysis (161-1) data requirement. Therefore, the Environmental fate data requirements recommended by EFGWB on 2/28/92 are no longer applicable. According to the letter of 11/2/92 from SRRD to Rohm and Haas Company, a hydrolysis study is required to support the Environmental Fate data requirement.

The submitted study for othililnone (MRID 42306401) is acceptable and can be used to support the Hydrolysis (161-1) data requirement. In this study, othililnone was found to be very stable in sterile aqueous buffer solutions (pH 5, 7, and 9) that were incubated in the dark at 24°C.

8. RECOMMENDATIONS:

The Environmental Fate data requirement for othililnone has been satisfied. No additional information on the environmental fate of othililnone is required at this time.

9. BACKGROUND:

According to the letter of 9/18/91 from Wendy W. Bingaman of Rohm and Haas Company to Frank Rubis of SRRD/OPP in response to the Reregistration Phase IV Data Call-In Notice, the registrant is only supporting two use sites: Aquatic Non-Food Industrial and Indoor Non-Food. The use of othililnone as cotton seed protestant (Reg. No. 707-127) under Terrestrial Food+Feed use group was canceled in April 1990.

Othililnone is currently used as an industrial mildewcide/fungicide (paints, coatings, wall paper pastes, caulks, sealants, aqueous emulsions, adhesives, polymer compounds, fabric, and leather processing). It is also used as an industrial microbicide in recirculating cooling towers and air washers, and in metalworking and hydraulic fluids.

10. DISCUSSION OF INDIVIDUAL TESTS OR STUDIES:

Refer to the attached review.

11. COMPLETION OF ONE-LINER:

The One-Liner Database for octhilinone has been updated.
