ONLY SEED OF HIGH GERMINATION with good vigor should be treated with Lindane. Poor seed may suffer greater injury. It is suggested that seed be treated in a well-ventilated area several weeks before planting. What effect prolonged storage has on germination has not been definitely established. Treated seed should be stored in a dry place until planted so that excess moisture may evaporate. If seed is stacked when very heavy dew develops, it may impair germination.

IF SOIL TEMPERATURE IS EXTREMELY HIGH in hot weather, midsummer, or in other areas, it is recommended to use a protective mulch. When the injury occurs due to soil germination conditions with a protective mulch.
