

NOTICE for PUBLIC COMMENT

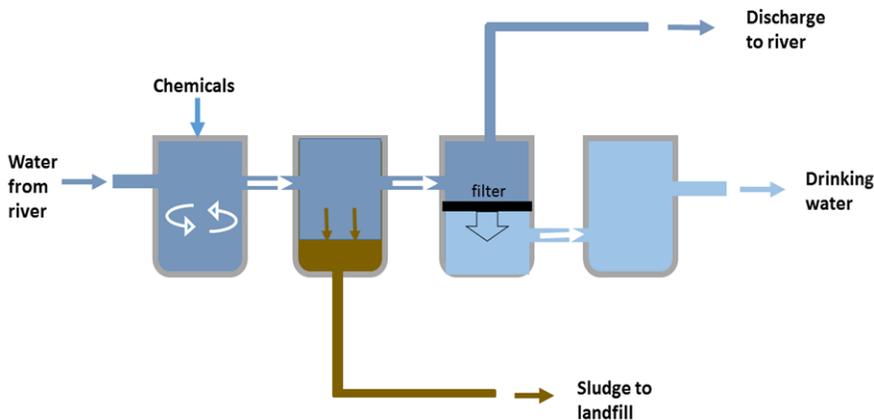

PRASA Añasco Water Treatment Plant Añasco, Puerto Rico

SUMMARY

The Puerto Rico Aqueduct and Sewer Authority (PRASA) has applied for renewal of its National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System (NPDES) permit for the Añasco Water Treatment Plant (WTP) in Añasco.

The Añasco Water Treatment Plant (WTP) is a filtration plant that treats water from the Rio Grande de Añasco to provide clean water to the Municipality of Añasco. Wastewater from the treatment plant is discharged to an intermittent creek tributary to the Añasco River.

The NPDES permit ensures that the amount of discharge and the amount of contaminants in the discharge remains below levels that are safe for the environment and public health consumption.

How to Access the Draft Permit Documents
Copies of the draft permit documents can be found on EPA's website at:
www.epa.gov/region02/water/permits.html
Hard copies are located at:
Casa Alcaldía de Añasco.

PRASA Añasco FLOW SCHEMATIC

This diagram summarizes the WTP process. This is based on a scenario where there is maximum water flowing in the treatment plant. The actual amounts of water may be less.

DRAFT PERMIT CONDITIONS

The permit establishes numeric water quality effluent limitations for several pollutants, including pH, dissolved oxygen, temperature, taste and odor, color, turbidity sulfates, total ammonia, suspended solids, and metals.

The permit limits the WTP's numeric flow effluent pursuant to Puerto Rico Environmental Quality Board (PREQB) and other conditions.

Under NPDES the permit specifies requirements for recording and reporting monitoring results of the numeric effluent limitations described above.
