Subject: AQS IN PRODUCTION

To ensure that data and system security is maintained, the default password is set to expire when you sign-on to the system so a new Oracle password change must be made on the first access to the system.

Below is the distribution sent yesterday announcing the availability of AQS for production. I am resending it to everyone because I did not include any installation instructions and because over 30 email addresses were invalid. If you have already installed the client, please just ignore this email. If there are users for your agency that are not listed, please ensure that they register.

Thanks,
